Creative child's play: the new self-adhesive colouring roll

Outside: snow and rain. Inside: kids who want to be entertained. It's always a good idea to have a few things tucked away on the top shelf of the closet that you can pull out when boredom strikes. The mood will brighten instantly once the little ones get their hands on the new self-adhesive colouring roll (30 cm x 3.2 m) from Faber-Castell. It unrolls to reveal a jungle and underwater landscape in which multiple motifs cleverly blend into one another. Children can work together to colour the three-metre-long roll with anything that's available - coloured pencils, felt pens, crayons, stamps and water colours. When it's finished, the artwork can be adhered to the wall and - to the relief of parents - removed without leaving any residue.
